Dr Amber Moore is an obstetrician and gynaecologist in full time private practice. She consults at St Vincent's Private Hospital and is a consulting gynaecologist at the Royal Women's Hospital.

Amber provides the full spectrum of obstetric and gynaecological consulting and surgical services, with a particular interest in obstetric care and laparoscopic gynaecological surgery.

Amber is a member of the Australian Gynaecological Endoscopy Society and a Fellow of the Australian College of Legal Medicine. She has also held various committee, teaching, training and coordination roles with RANZCOG. She is currently a Federal Councillor for RANZCOG, along with committee positions including the Women's Health Committee and deputy chair of the Continuing Professional Education Committee.

Amber believes that treating patients is also about caring for families. She places great importance in valuing and caring for each individual patient, including assessing them to make informed choices concerning their treatment, and providing as much personal and face-to-face attention as possible.
